

Reproduced by permission of Ordnance Survey on behalf of HMSO. © Crown copyright and database right 2009. All rights reserved. Ordnance Survey Licence number 100019855

The Weatherman Walking maps are intended as a guide to the TV programme only. Routes and conditions may have changed since the programme was made.

The BBC takes no responsibility for any accident or injury that may occur while following the route. Always wear appropriate clothing and footwear and check weather conditions before heading out.

Approximate distance: 6 miles

A hill walk through one of the most beautiful and least known areas of Wales, taking in romantic ruins, and stunning scenery.

1. Llanthony Priory – The Start

Llanthony is a shortened and anglicised form of the Welsh name, Llanddewi Nant Honddu - David's Church by the little river Honddu.

4. Offa's Dyke

This section is a gentle ramble. Offa didn't bother with any kind of ditch or wall here. The mountain itself provided all the protection that he was looking for.

2. Llandor House

These are the remains of a house built by the poet Walter Savage Landor in the 19th century.

His attempts to build a successful estate here failed miserably!

5. The path down to the valley

About 2 miles north along the ridge, a stone pile marks the route to Capel y Ffin.

Nearby Vision Farm inspired Bruce Chatwin's novel, 'On the Black Hill'.

3. Hatterall Hill

Now the walk begins to get a bit more serious as you climb to the top of the ridge.

Look for the distinctive 'U' shaped Ewyas valley – a remnant of the last Ice Age.

6. Capel y Ffin

This means 'chapel on the boundary or border' but there are plenty – a non conformist chapel, parish church, old monastery and statue of the Virgin Mary.

This is where the walk ended.